Mrs. Orville Flaine Hostess
to Circle No. 1 of W. M. U.
Mrs. Orville Flaine was hostess to Circle 1 of the W. M. U. of the First Baptist Church at her home on Monday afternoon with eight members present for the regular meeting.

The chairman, Mrs. Watson White, Jr., presided and opened the meeting with Scripture reading. Mrs. Leroy Phillips led in prayer and presented the study on "The West Is Big."

At the conclusion of the business meeting, Mrs. Watson Buchanan, vice president, presented the closing prayer. Coffee and donuts were served during the social hour.

WMU Circle 2 Meets
In Home of Mrs. Fred White
Seven members of Circle 2 of the W. M. U. of the First Baptist Church met on Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Fred White. The meeting was opened with prayer by Mrs. Layne Anderson. Each one present quoted a Scripture and gave remarks on the subject.

Mrs. Thomas Buchanan, chairman, led in prayer and conducted the business.

The study on "The West Is Big" proved in the House.

The author of the Senate measure, Sen. J. Ford Smith of Arkansas, said failure to pass it would "put your little country under a cloud."

The chief sponsor of the bill, Sen. Jack Clark of Oklahoma, said passage would do the same thing.

By a vote of 54 to 46, the Senate passed the bill.

The Senate also passed a 9.3 million dollar supplemental appropriation for highway construction during the remaining four and a half months of this fiscal year.

Sen. Leo Royster of Warren, who explained the 9.3 million was revenue in excess of what the Legislature anticipated when it made the highway appropriation in 1951. The money could not be spent without an appropriation.

Sen. Fletcher Long of Forrest City introduced a bill to make it legal the use of threat of force to prevent lawful picketing in labor disputes. The measure would amend the anti-violence act of 1943, which already prohibits force to keep a person from engaging in a lawful vocation.

The race problem first became public June 9 when disgruntled seminary faculty members issued a statement against the refusal of the board of trustees to adopt a recommendation of the fourth province synod that Negro candidates for the ministry be admitted to the seminary.

The trustees said that Tennessee law did not permit such admissions, and said no Negroes had ever applied for entrance.

is in the works, to be sent out within a few days. The first, issued last Friday, decontrolled meat and nearly all department store goods. Another order the same day knocked out wage curbs.

Price Stabilizer Joseph Freehill said dismissal notices, effective March 15, will be handed out Monday to about 2,000 of the 4,500 employees in the government's disintegrating price control machinery.

A last-minute decision kept price curbs on milk and dairy products and took them off petroleum products.

Freehill said some price hikes will result from the order, notably on gasoline, crude oil and tires and tubes. He said prices on other items probably will not be affected since many already are selling below ceilings.

Controls went into effect two years ago last month. They are due to expire automatically April 30, but administration spokesmen have set April 15 as the ultimate target date for wiping them out.

So far, Eisenhower has not asked for standby power to re-impose controls should an emergency arise. Sen. Capehart (R-Ind.) who has introduced a bill to do this, has said the administration has assured him it has an open mind on the subject of standby controls.

DOROTHY DIX

Too Friendly

Dear Miss Dix: My wife is a fine person albeit too sensitive. She is the only girl I ever loved, or ever would love.

We do have one point of disagreement. I believe in being friendly and giving a personal touch to all my contacts. I hate the formality of Mr., Mrs., and Miss, and always like to call people by their first names. I like to know the people I ride to work with, the waitresses, taxi drivers, bank tellers, store clerks — everyone, in fact, I meet during the course of a day. My wife feels I am being too familiar in many cases. I like to kid with people, both men and women, and I admit this has backfired a few times when people have come back at me with remarks my wife didn't like.

I don't see how I can change my personality, but it is annoying my wife to the point where her usually very sweet disposition is being soured. She is getting moody and cold. I know I have hurt her on several occasions but I don't see how I can change my personality completely.

HARRY
Answer: Well, Harry, I guess we might as well get on first name basis right away. It's a fine thing to have the type of personality you have — in fact I think the ability to make friends at sight is one of the best gifts anyone can have. Like many good things, it can be overdone, and it is in the abuse of the talent that trouble lies. You are making a travesty of friendship in the way you abuse your gift. Concentrate more effort on winning a few good friends rather than trying to include the entire human race in your arms-around-the-neck campaign. I am prone to assume, although you do not say so, that you are much more likely to be interested in spreading cheer among young ladies than among men or older women. This, doubtless, is what brings protests from your wife. While you try to give the impression that your attitude is one of creating cheer among people, it is actually much more a desire to lift your own ego by having everyone hail you as a good fellow. While it is much better to smile than to frown, you should not carry geniality to the point of over-familiarity. A warm smile and word of greeting — yes; but the kidding angle is out.

If you are sincere in your desire to please your wife, it won't be at all difficult for you to tone down your exuberance to a pitch of good fellowship. Stop concentrating on pretty young girls, and be pleasant to children and old people, too. Cut down on the banter, and strive for more sincerity in your contacts. Face the fact that you are not an eternal adolescent, and behave like an adult. Don't turn into a sourpuss though, the world does need smiles but direct them in the right places and at the right time, saving the major portion for the little woman at home.

Dear Miss Dix: I am married to a perfectly wonderful man and we have one child. My relationship with my in laws is fine.

When we married five years ago I had my savings, life insurance, etc., transferred from my mother's name to my husband's, he, however, has neglected to do the same. Since we have a child, I think this detail should be given consideration. I haven't mentioned the matter to my husband, and wonder if I should.

P. R.
Answer: By all means, your husband's insurance — or at least, most of it — should name you or his child as beneficiary. The matter of altering certain documents after marriage may not have occurred to him or he may have other reasons in mind. Such a thing but special protection for you. In any event, these things should be subject of frank discussion between husband and wife. You should ask him about them.

Dear Miss Dix: I am a girl of teenage — just out of high school. A few weeks ago I met an officer in the Army and have come to think a great deal of him. He is several years older than I. He expects to go overseas soon, and recently told me it would be best for us not to see each other again for fear one of us would be hurt. I am willing to go on seeing him knowing he may leave at any time.

SYLVIA T
Answer: I may be reading a lot between the lines, but I think your officer has more in mind than saving heartache because he's going overseas. There may even be a wife in the background. Better keep your emotions in hand, at least until you know a bit more about him. You've given your affection with very little warranty in this case.

These Days

George E. Sokolsky

APPRAISING AN ENEMY

There is an apparent tendency to say that the Russian people are not responsible for their intense enmity toward the United States, but that Stalin and his comparatively small Communist Party are to blame. Does it really make any difference?

The American problem is now one of survival. We were taken into two wars against Germany and came out in 1944 with the most formidable enemy in our history. We have pursued since 1945 a policy of appeasement in the hope that this might be ended.

This policy has failed. Actually, the Russians, by subtle diplomacy and by utilizing new weapons of war, ideological propaganda and penetration, planned the United States down in an absurd war for war.

Korea, by the use of an old and tried device, with which our State Department should have been familiar after General George Marshall's failure in China, Soviet diplomacy saved her allies in Korea and China from failure in the Korean War by true negotiations which have now been prolonged into 10 months of meaningless conversations.

Actually, we are still pinned down in Korea and the American economy is still involved in the prospect of aid and preparation for war. In addition, a dread disease, called neutralism, is developing in Europe which could leave us without allies. For this reason, John Foster Dulles, with a toughness to which Europeans are not accustomed from the United States, has visited our associates in NATO and has told them precisely that the United States expects them to live up to their agreements. Also, President Eisenhower has adopted a realistic role toward the Koreans, Chinese and Poles.

As for China, it is about time that we made clear to Nehru that we are taking no guff from him and that we could regard Pakistan as a more friendly nation.

In this complex situation, imperiling the lives of our children, there is no reason for the United States to be bothered over the intellectual niceties of whether the Russians are or are not Communists. It is a matter of fact that the Russian people are not Communists. They are a people who have gone to school and college since 1917 have been entirely and fully Leninist and more recently Stalinist. All textbooks are Marxist. Everything in newspapers, radio and now television is Marxist. No books come in from the outside world unless the Communist Party permits it. These people are drilled into being our enemies and are trained to believe that our way of life is evil.

Some emotionally soft Americans feel that we must distinguish between the Russian people and Stalin for these reasons:

1. There are Americans with ties of birth, marriage or cultural affiliations who simply cannot get themselves to believe that the Russian masses have succeeded in Stalinism. They feel that if the present regime were overthrown, the Russians would suddenly love us.

2. Since the end of the European war, a number of Russians, particularly officers, have escaped and have come into our hands. Some are probably sincere; others may be plants. Such refugees from Stalin have been screened and have given our intelligence agencies plenty of information, some of which is valuable but little of which is checkable by normal standards. Many who have heard their stories are deeply impressed that the unrest behind the Iron Curtain is greater than we know. They believe that if we add ferment to that unrest, we might weaken Stalin's regime.

3. The persecution of the Jews behind the Iron Curtain is taken as a sign of desperation. However, Stalin's antagonism to Jews is not new. Stalin, in his quarrel with Trotsky, eliminated all but one Jew from the Politburo. He dismissed Litvinov in 1939 to please Hitler during the Stalin-Hitler alliance. Even while he was allied to us in World War II, he removed Jews from the diplomatic service. His present anti-Semitic course is the normal operation of a monolithic police.

All this need not intrigue Americans because what we face is war. Our concern is to avert another universal war if we can and to be ready to fight to victory if we cannot. Our enemy is Russia. It can only weaken our thinking and our spirit if we worry over the question of what is a good or a bad Russian. The answer to the question is that any Russian is the enemy.

The defendants John Wise and Nan Wise are hereby warned to appear in this Court within thirty (30) days and answer the complaint of the petitioners and plaintiffs.

High Altitude Rough on Rats

DENVER 12—High living can be dangerous, especially for rats. That's no moralistic axiom—it's a finding announced yesterday by Dr. Essie White Cohn, University of Denver chemist and physiologist.

She reported on four years of experiments involving several hundred rats.

It could even develop into a real fight, this meeting between the two young principles of the heavyweight division. The affair has been kept something of a secret by the International Boxing Club, which was occupied with flooring its Middle East clients, but the fact remains it is the nearest thing to a natural the unlimited class afforded at the moment, excepting the big one coming up between Marciano and Walcott in April.

Under their own-hand contrivance to eliminate each other, either Layne or LaStarza is virtually assured a crack at the title during the summer. Both have upon occasion shown themselves capable of giving such revolting exhibition that they were forced to flee across state lines, but with the prize being dangled before them tonight it seems safe to predict they will really go at it.

Though LaStarza was a slight favorite the last time we looked, there really is very little upon which to base a choice. Probably LaStarza is favored because he comes closer to being a known quantity. He has lost only three of his 55 fights, one of those on a split decision to the current heavyweight champion.

Layne, on the other hand, has never given anyone cause to even suspect what he might do next. He holds decisions over two former world champions, Walcott and Ezzard Charles, and yet he has lost to men who probably had to buy their way into the ring record book. It was by beating the erratic character from Utah that Harry Matthews gained a shot at Rocky Marciano last summer.

Since then Layne is supposed to have become an absolutely changed gladiator, as full of determination as a slot machine addict and his eyes unwaveringly upon the big goal. They say this could have come from the shock he received when Referee Jack Dempsey lifted his glove at the conclusion of his bout with Charles at Salt Lake City last summer. That was the one where the old mauler awarded Layne three rounds and said that nothing had happened in the other seven.

This is about the first real chance LaStarza has had to get back into the main picture since his unfortunate meeting with Marciano some three years ago. He's 26 now, and unless he makes his move tonight he'll soon find the years running out on him.

At the time he fought Rocky he was, if anything, further along the road toward fame than the boy from Brockton was. LaStarza had won 37 straight since leaving the Golden Gloves, whereas Marciano had racked up only 21 second-rounders in a row. We recall there was some surprise in local fight circles that Al Weill, Rocky's manager, was taking such a risk.

But, as usual, Weill knew what he was doing, even if he did slice it a little thinner than usual. Two out of three officials thought Marciano won, and the anguished yelps from LaStarza's corner did nothing to change the decision.

LaStarza concedes now that that was when he made his big mistake. He decided to sit tight until he was forced, or shamed, Rocky into giving him a return. Rocky, of course, has nothing to say about it, and Weill, who then was doubling as IBC matchmaker, was a tough man to force into anything. While LaStarza sat, Marciano went on along his carefully plotted course to the title and the kind of money Roland has only read about.

NEW YORK 12—Those television fans who still are game and full of fight after having attended the fight for their idol Chuck Davy, are promised something more closely resembling a contest in tonight's 10-rounder there between Rex Layne and Roland LaStarza.

Britain and Egypt Agree on Sudan

CARRO, Egypt 12 — A British-Egyptian agreement giving the eight million people of the neighboring Sudan the right to determine their own future is expected to be signed here today. The pact would help pave the way for talks on a Middle East defense system tied to the Atlantic Alliance.

Reports from London said that Prime Minister Churchill's government planned an important statement on the Sudan in the House of Commons today. The British Cabinet reportedly approved the agreement with Egypt during an hour-long meeting yesterday.

Egyptian Premier Mohammed Naguib is expected to initial the accord for the Cairo government, with Ambassador Sir Ralph Stevenson signing for Britain. Usually well-informed British sources said the delegation, originally planned to complete the pact yesterday but "slight technical details" delayed things.

The agreement trims Britain's influence in the million-square-mile, cotton-growing land on the upper Nile that she has ruled jointly with Egypt for 54 years.

It also removes one of the chief sources of discord between Britain and Egypt, leaving only the question of British troops in the strategic Suez Canal zone still troubling relations between the two countries and barring the way to possible Egyptian participation in the joint defense discussions.

Successive Cairo governments long have demanded that the British get out of the Sudan. In October, 1951, the Egyptian Parliament proclaimed the nullity of the entire Nile Valley under the Egyptian crown.

The new pact, however, gives the Sudanese people the right to freely determine their own political future within the next three years. They may choose to join Egypt, become a member of the British Commonwealth or establish themselves as an unlinked independent state.

The accord provides for country-wide elections leading to the formation of a Sudanese parliament, international supervision of the self-determination processes, orderly transfer of power from the present British-Egyptian administrators to the Sudanese, and political safeguards for two million less-advanced pagan Negroes who live in the southern part of the country.

Throughout the negotiations for the agreement, the British insisted that such safeguards were necessary to protect the backward Southerners who might otherwise be at the mercy of their more advanced Moslem neighbors.

Egypt and Britain still face the difficult question of hammering out an agreement on the Suez question. Naguib's government has made it plain that both the Suez and the Sudanese problems must be settled before it can join in broader defense discussions with the West.

Clouds Help Reds Supply Front Troops

By ROBERT UDDICK
SEOUL, Korea, (UP) — The Communists repaired their battered supply routes and brought much-needed war material to the front today under cover of heavy clouds that grounded United Nations warplanes.

The Reds got a welcome rest from intense Allied air attacks during the morning. Bad weather gave them the rare change of putting supply vehicles on the road during daylight hours without fear of assault.

"There is no air action to report," a 5th Air Force spokesman said. "This is the kind of weather the Communists like. They can move as they please."

Twelve B-29 Superforts from Okinawa beat the overcast shortly before midnight and dropped 20 tons of bombs in clear weather on a Red troop center near Pyongyang and a supply area near Sariwon. One Communist night fighter made a firing pass at the six B-29's in the Sariwon assault. The other six Superforts weaved through light anti-aircraft fire to bomb the Pyongyang target.

B-26 light bombers had one of their best nights of the year in hitting crowded roads at six Red supply bottlenecks. They destroyed 135 Communist trucks.

"On our first run we saw seven trucks burst into flames," said Capt. James W. Babb of Oklahoma City. "The fires seemed to hop from one truck to another."

"We came by on a second run and as our bombs hit, there was an explosion that lit up our plane like a flashbomb. I spotted five more trucks burning on this run."

The fog-shrouded front remained quiet during the night with only scattered patrol fights reported.

Gasoline Price Probers Are Marking Time

LITTLE ROCK, 12 — A House investigation of oil company executives is expected to mark time just marking time.

They were waiting for approval of a $100,000 appropriation to finance a study of the oil industry that they have been asked to undertake so far.

The House, which set up the investigating committee headed by Rep. Jim Egan of Missouri County, defeated one bill to give it funds. A new request was introduced yesterday.

Hearings, at which oil company executives are testifying under oath, have been recessed until tomorrow morning to enable witnesses to compile more detailed information on prices and out-of-state prices of Arkansas-produced petroleum products.

So far, testimony has developed there two main points: Lion Oil Co. sells its gasoline on out-of-state markets cheaper than it does in Arkansas.

Pan-Am Petroleum Corp. sells a lower price on heavy, dark fuel at Memphis, Tenn., than it does at Arkansas City, Ark.

Officials of the oil industry are reluctant to admit the reason for the differences was "to meet competition on the out-of-state markets."

E. F. Hils, state manager for Pan-Am, denied that there was a collusion among oil companies to fix prices in Arkansas. Competition determines the prices, he said, and competition is responsible for the fact that prices on most brands are the same.

Hils said he had no information on out-of-state gasoline sales by Pan-Am. He said such sales were handled by the New Orleans office of his firm.
